OUR CELEBRATION

It was 1926 that the undergraduate program in journalism was created at Rutgers. It was 1927 that an undergraduate program in librarianship began at the College for Women, later Douglass College, and 1953 when the masters degree in librarianship was established. It was 1971 that Rutgers first offered an undergraduate major in communication.

But it was 1982 that the School of Communication, Information and Library Studies was established at the university with the merger of the Graduate School of Library and Information Studies and the School of Communication Studies. What this means, of course, is that 2007 is the silver anniversary year of SCILS.

Throughout the fall 2007 semester, SCILS will be offering a series of events offered as part of its anniversary celebration. These events will include scholarly talks, showcases of student work, colloquia exploring current issues and trends in society, and other events. Information about all of these events will appear on the SCILS website.

The SCILS Alumni Association will make its major contribution to the 25th Anniversary celebrations by hosting a dinner celebration on Friday, October 12, at the Heldrich Hotel, New Brunswick's newest luxury hotel on the corner of George Street and Livingstone Avenue, directly opposite the New Brunswick theaters. The dinner will consist of a cocktail hour (with open bar), a sit-down four-course meal, musical entertainment and dancing, and a program prepared by the SCILS Alumni Association honoring beloved people in and to the SCILS alumni community. Natalie Morales, national correspondent on NBC's Today show and SCILS graduate, will be our Mistress of Ceremonies. Our goal is to make this event something that will be remembered for many, many years to come.
